When you arrive at the museum, come to the entrance of the Tunnel Shaft near the back of the museum. Look out for the big red barn doors and then follow the banner that reads 'Tunnel Shaft, this way'. There will be a member of staff here to greet you and they will sign your child in on the register.

The actual workshops will take place in the Tunnel Shaft itself - the large underground chamber next to the Brunel Museum's main Engine House building. This is where you will drop children off and collect them at the end of each session.

Can I drop my children off at the museum and then collect them at the end?

Yes, you are free to drop your children off and collect them once the session is over, meeting at the top viewing balcony of the Tunnel Shaft. The after-school club lasts from 4pm-5pm.

You must sign in and sign out on the register with a member of staff.

How accessible is the Museum?

The Museum is an historic site and, where possible, ramps have been installed.

The Tunnel Shaft is accessed via a spiral staircase, with a viewing platform available at the top of the stairs for anyone unable to use stairs.

The majority of the outside spaces, with the exception of the garden on top of the Tunnel Shaft are fully accessible.

Please do let the Museum know of any access requirements prior to your visit so that we can provide the best experience for your children as possible.

Are there toilets?

The Museum has two toilets available in the Engine House.

Is there heating?

There is limited heating at the Museum and we therefore recommend that you come dressed for the weather. The Tunnel Shaft is fitted with some heaters though warm clothing is strongly recommended.
